"THERE SHOULD BE NO MISTAKES."
The above is the declaration of an esteemed Democratic contemporary, but forgetting himself, in a moment he commits a series of mistakes of the gravest kind. We note two or three. He says "the Democratic party will this year carry California." This is a mistake, and to publish it in the same paper that contained the announcement that the Republican State Committee held a love-feast in San Francisco and had decided upon a "vigorous campaign," was a grave oversight, and for which we can hardly account. Desirous of sustaining our friend's veracity for truthfulness, and his reputation as a seer, we shall suppose he penned his braggadocio before receipt of the San Francisco telegram. And that was another mistake. One should grow when getting "out of the wood," not when just entering it. Says our friend further on: "The Democratic party will undoubtedly carry New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania." This sounds like similar utterances from the same source in 1880, when the chances for Democratic success were "pivotal" and finally turned the wrong way. The prophecy was an egregious mistake then, and it is rubbing it in to suppose the people of those glorious old States will turn from the pleasant fields of Republicanism to the boggy heaths of Democracy.

Eight cases of smallpox have been discovered in San Francisco since Sunday. The most alarming of the cases was that of a prisoner in the county jail, confined on a charge of manslaughter, named Doggett. The disease is supposed to have been conveyed into the jail through the medium of clothes brought from a Chinese washhouse.

This San Jose electric light tower has been attached for debt, the sum being about $1,000. Mr. Owen, the friend and projector of the tower, says he is going to see the thing through safely, and "stay by the tower until it rusts down but what the light shall come." Good for Owen.

"The Phantom City," the missing link of American Archeology, vague rumors of which have been heard, is reported to have been discovered by the correspondent of the North American Review, a Mr. Charney. It is situated in the country of the Tzuc-dones, a warlike tribe of Guatemala.

JEWISH PERSECUTIONS.

Every true American has sympathized with our Jewish fellow-men over the terrible persecutions to which that sect has been subjected in Russia, particularly during the past twelve months. Religious toleration is the cornerstone of the American government, and the descendants of the Pilgrim fathers join in no sentiment more heartily than in that which declares that "They left unstained what here they found—freedom to worship God." So we have but to be told that the hand of religious intolerance is anywhere raised, and our blood is warmed; and, remembering the persecutions that drove our forefathers from their homes to the wild New England coast, our sympathies go out to the oppressed, regardless of the sect to which they may belong or the nation that claims them as citizens. And the Christian is not going far away from home and kindred when he extends the hand of friendship to the children of Abraham. David was a son of Abraham, and he was of the seed of David who died upon the Cross, and became the Christian's atonement. And for the act of the Crucifixion, should not the disciple be as tolerant as the Master, "Forgive them, they know not what they do?"

Our attention is called afresh to the persecutions of the Russian Jews by the receipt of a pamphlet giving an account of the meetings held simultaneously in London and New York to protest against the persecutions alluded to. At the New York meeting, presided over by Mayor Grace and patronized by the leading politicians and humanitarians of New York and the nation, the Hon. Wm. M. Evarts made a speech which in our opinion well represents the sentiment of Christian America, and we think our readers will thank us for this opportunity to peruse a portion of it:

"In southern and western Russia, from the Baltic to the Black Sea, covering a region as large as the British Islands and France together, and affecting a Hebrew population of the Russian Empire three millions in number, there has prevailed for more than nine months a bitter and relentless persecution of race and religion. And this has happened at a time when the world is sensitive, all over it, at every moment, to what is occurring in every part of it. These persecutions, these oppressions, these cruelties, these outrages, have taken every form, and every form in the experience of mankind, or which the human tongue can describe. Men have been cruelly murdered, women brutally outraged, children dashed to pieces or burned alive in their homes; whole streets occupied by this population, in various cities, have been razed to the ground; the quarters which the Jewish population occupied have been made desolate by fire; thousands of families, shelterless and homeless, have been reduced to beggary; even banishment from the boundaries has been exercised by municipalities, to play their part in this misery and this desolation. One hundred and sixty towns and villages in Russia have felt the scourge of this persecution. It has prevailed from April until Christmas; and the greatest outrage was on Christmas Day, at Warsaw; when three hundred shops and six hundred shops were plundered in that city, and a garrison of twenty thousand soldiers was kept within their barracks, and gave no aid to the sufferers and obeyed no authority to protect them. And this was on the morning when, in the name of Christ, peace and good-will was proclaimed throughout the world to all men. This was a Christian celebration of Christmas Day upon the persons and the property of their fellow men.

The actual woes, the actual forms and extremities of outrage, are too horrible for recital; they are too much for us to speak; they are too hard for you to hear. They happened far away and among foreign races. And yet you feel them, although you have never looked into the face of one of the victims; when you read them, although you stand in no dread of the brutish ignorance and brutal passions ever exercised at your risk, or to your affliction. Are we to say, "This is the oppression of the Jews by the Russians. What is that to us? Why have we any part or lot in this matter?" This is but one more of the ever-recurring forms and instances of that question—asked so early in the history of our race—"Am I my brother's keeper?" It is not that it is the oppression of men and women by men and women; and we are men and women. If one touch of nature makes the whole world kin, how can we fail to recognize this sympathy when in every point, dear and near to our civilization, we feel the outrage, we feel the resentment, and we feel the duty of seeing to it that our voice and moral power go—the voice and power of this nation of fifty millions—that it shall not be repeated. Husband and wife, parent and child, matron and maid, all the tender relations that make up the home, that make up the life of Christian civilization, all have been trampled under foot, over this great region, through this great population, through this long period of time. All this justifies us in denouncing and rescuing these cruelties, and in protesting against them, and preventing their repetition if we can."

The meetings resulted in sending to the Russian Government powerful protests from our own and the people of England, which it is fondly hoped will not be unheeded by it, and that we shall hear of no more atrocious oppressions from that source.

Crops.
The grain crops in the vicinity of Anaheim are said to be in fine condition, and give every prospect of an abundant harvest. At Westminster they are reported to be not quite so good, and the farmers may get only hay.

It is a common mistake to cut lettuce with a knife and fork. The tenderness and delicacy of the leaves are thus destroyed. Lettuce should be eaten with a fork, around which the largest leaves can be adroitly gathered.

A large picture ring screwed into the top of the handle, is the nicest thing made by which to hang up a broom. A strong screw, with a small head, should be placed in the wall at a proper height to receive it.

Actors often quarrel, but they always have to "make up" before they go on the stage.

IS THE LINNET GUILTY?

An Oakland Fruit Grower Thinks It Is Not.
Many of the fruit growers about this city have been engaged in a crusade against the little linnets which infest their orchards and gardens. Whether they have fully investigated the matter and know it to be a fact that they destroy the fruit buds, as charged, we do not know, but thousands of the little fellows have been destroyed during the past season, and if the correspondent as quoted below is correct, a great wrong has been done. Perhaps appearances only have been against the birds, and they are, after all, the fruit grower's best friend. Better not to be too fast. Here is the correspondence. It is from the Riverside Press:

EDITOR PRESS AND POST-COURIER:
In reading your valuable journal I noticed an item some weeks ago that a resident of Riverside and fruit grower had during the winter killed some 3,000 linnets and other small birds that were eating the fruit buds. I write this line to say that I think this charge against the birds is a mistake. I have, on cherry trees, and, I am sure, on all the linnets of the city, and having understood from similar items to the one just quoted, that small birds fed on fruit buds, I naturally concluded my cherries would be a failure. But judge my surprise to see the tree white with perfectly-formed blossoms, and now loaded with well-formed cherries. I am now entirely satisfied that the little birds were eating the larva of insects, or perhaps the gum gathered around the buds, thus performing a good deed, for which I am now greatly pleased, and shall hereafter encourage all the little birds to winter in my trees. This is written hoping my friend who killed so many of these useful birds will investigate the matter more fully, as I am satisfied he has been killing some of his best friends.

I have always reasoned with my Eastern friends that one cause of our California fruit being so free from worms was owing to our open winters, during which all the small birds remained with us and busied themselves eating the insects, and thus kept the pests from our fruit. If we increase the number of trees and kill all the birds, we may as well abandon the raising of choice, unblemished fruit. Oakland, Cal., April 20.

QUONG KONG.

The Henchmen Ditty of Los Angeles Chinatown.

Fronting towards Alameda street, near Aliso street, are the two Chinese joss houses. On a recent visit to the newer one of the two, a TIMES reporter learned something about one of the deities that presides over the destinies of Chinatown. The name of this is Quong Kong, and a Chinaman named Ah Toy gravely informed the TIMES man that the aforesaid Quong Kong was a good man who lived in China some two or three thousand years ago, and that he did everything very honestly and decently, and was a noble character. He earned him a god-like existence, and to-day he is sought for by Chinamen when in business or in trouble for counsel, which he never fails to give at the right time. All attempts to draw the wily Celestial into a theological argument were failures, and the reporter, who had been replying that it was all right to think so. His highness, Quong Kong, is a corpulent god, and lives in a dark and poorly ventilated hole. He has two ugly attendants, and before him are continually kept tapers of lighted-pink and dishes of rice and pork. The janitor of the place gets a twenty-five dollar salary for his services. The building, god and full equipments were said to have cost about three thousand dollars, the money being raised by subscription among the believers.

Point-to-Point on the Virginia Shore.

Mr. Editor: I've just read, in one of the "dailies," some remarks by way of comparison in relation to the Sunday law (as it is now being enforced in this county), being like Point-to-Point on the Virginia shore. The writer, an editor, knows why it is so. Please tell him for me (and perhaps his own party interest, too), not to ask such questions, and also to cease such rapid utterances as that the Board of Supervisors will refuse to order payment of expenses incurred under the State law, and which the county is bound to pay, and can be forced to if necessary. How there he comes to know wine put into old bottles lately, sir? A CHINAMAN.

COAST ITEMS.

The Laguna de los Ocos, near San Luis Obispo, is being drained. This will cost $1,200, and will render available over 400 acres of the richest land.

The Tombstone Epitaph has been bought by some prominent Democratic politicians, and after May 1st, will be edited by Samuel Purdy, Jr., now of the Yuma Free Press, and will be run as an out-and-out Democratic journal.

Robert H. Boyd, a highly respected young man of Baker City, Oregon, was returning from church the other Sunday, where he had been baptized, when his horse stumbled and fell, throwing him heavily to the ground. He was picked up unconscious and unable to move, from which state he never recovered.

D. A. Upton, a bridge carpenter, employed by the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, was killed in a tunnel near the Dalles last week. He was on a hand-car, with five other men, just entering the tunnel, when they met a construction train. All jumped off and escaped unhurt, but Mr. Upton, who remained on the hand-car, was run over by the engine.

To illustrate the building activity in Hailey, Wood river, the TIMES says not a foot of dimension building lumber can be had in that city; neither can sash nor doors. During the winter the supply in town was over 500,000 feet, which has all been used up. One or two hundred thousand feet would be snapped up at once at sixty dollars per thousand, if it could be obtained.

A writer in the Santa Rosa Republic says that Kelsey Creek, on the road to Clear Lake, was filled with black fish, chaparral trout, perch, and a foot in length. They are running up stream, and the water "boiled" with them going over the riffles. They are numbered by thousands—it would hardly be exaggeration to say millions. Looking back after crossing, we saw the white bellies of perhaps two dozen fish turned up as their bodies floated away, killed by the homes and wheels of the stage. A little boy stood on the edge of the creek, and kicked enough on the bank, directly, to fill a potato-sack."

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

The War Department Has Heard of the Arizona Troubles.

The Chinese Bill Will Come up To-day—Train Robbers Caught—Ralph Waldo Emerson Dead.

Associated Press Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The War Department has dispatches confirming the reports of Indian depredations. There is much indignation outside of army circles that nothing more can be accomplished to protect the people of Arizona. At the Department it is explained that it is impossible to use cavalry to any advantage in the mountains and canyons, and that infantry are entirely worthless. The whole number of troops in the Department of Arizona is 1,500, half cavalry and Indian scouts.

ARIZONA MATTERS.
A message from the President to Congress this afternoon recites that great lawlessness exists in Arizona; that the Government reports that the army is permitted to co-operate with the civil authorities, and that soldiers are permitted to be employed in that Territory as a posse comitatus. Referred to Judiciary Committee.

HAMMERING AWAY AT THE CHINESE.

On the opening of the Senate this morning, the discussion of the Chinese bill was continued by Mr. Farley. His speech was frequently interrupted by a Massachusetts Senator who said that the bill contained many misstatements concerning the North Adams Chinese experiment, and by the reception of a message from the President about the Arizona troubles. Mr. Farley continued his speech at 3:30, and dwelt on the floor. He spoke on the Chinese bill very briefly, and was followed by Vest, who made an eloquent speech in favor of the bill.

GOES OVER ANOTHER DAY.

The presentation of a conference report on the Postoffice Appropriation bill and some debate on it, prevented action on the Chinese bill to-day, and it went over at five until to-morrow.

BLAINE'S FRIENDS.

Blaine's friends are highly pleased over his course in the investigating committee. It is felt that he has fairly succeeded in putting his administration of the State Department in a proper light, an opportunity he has not before had.

FROM CHICAGO.

A Portion of the Texas Train Robbers Captured.

Chicago, April 27.—Four of the gang of highwaymen who attempted to rob the express train on the T. & P. Pacific Railroad last week have been captured, and there is a prospect that the entire gang will be secured. A reward of $10,000 for each of each of the gang is being offered by the railroad company.

A HORRIBLE AFFAIR.

A horrible affair is reported from Georgia. A gang of one hundred State convicts, chained together, were being transported on platform cars en route for their work at wood cutting. The train stopped at a station, and the convicts got off the cars and then chained to those on board. The train started suddenly, and those who had got off, being unable to get on the cars, were dragged over the rails and, for some distance, fell foremost. Six of the unfortunate were so badly mangled that they are not expected to survive.

Another Great Man Gone.

BOSTON, April 27.—Ralph Waldo Emerson died at his home in Concord, Massachusetts, at nine o'clock this evening.

Irish Affairs.

LONDON, April 26.—In the House of Commons Foster announced the withdrawal of the objectionable circular of Police Inspector Smith, in regard to the Clifford Hotel. It is intimated that Smith would be punished. He stated that the erection of huts for shelter would not be interfered with.

Sir Charles Dilke said the Government did not intend to introduce a bill to deal with alien "suspects."

SAN FRANCISCO JOTTINGS.

Second Day's Meet of the Pacific Blood Horse Association.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—The attendance was large this afternoon at the second day's races at Bay District Park under the auspices of the Pacific Blood Horse Association. The weather was unusually fine and the track in excellent condition. The first race was for the Heart stakes, free for all, dash of three-quarters of a mile. There were three starters. Won by Jim Renwick, Atlanta second, Night Hawk third. Time, 2:23. This race for selling purse, dash one and one-eighth miles. Six starters. Won by Minnie Norrie, Belcher second, Geo. Bender third. Time, 1:57. Fourth race, for Pacific Cup, two and a quarter miles. Three starters. Won by Duxbury, Norfolk second, Precious third. Time, 3:58.

AN INDIAN HUNG.

A Colusa dispatch on the night of April 24th says an Indian was hung by a mob on Stony Creek, thirty miles west of Colusa. He had threatened the life of J. M. Pugh, a prominent farmer, and as he had been engaged in one murder and was a desperate character, he was taken out and hung. He had been arrested and was in charge of a constable at the time.

Shooting at Bundy.

BODIE, Cal., April 27.—A shooting affray occurred at Bundy yesterday, between James Slack and Michael Egan, both miners. Slack was shot four times and died this morning. Egan was shot in the right arm, the right side, but was not dangerously wounded. Slack was a quarrelsome man, and killed John Clark in Bundy two years ago. Egan long lived in Virginia City and was considered a peaceable citizen.

Stocks.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—California, 10; Curry, 24; Mexican, 8; Ophir, 4; Union, 14; Nevada, 94; Eureka, 24; Belcher, 60; Utah, 54; Belle, 8; Best, 51; Bodie, 65; Mono, 18; King, 17.

Notice to the Public.

I have opened a first class undertaking and embalming establishment, No. 24 Main street, adjoining Baker Block. All business entrusted to my care will receive prompt attention and satisfaction guaranteed to all. Hearse furnished free. E. A. De Camp is connected with the establishment. Respectfully, ALBERT BROWN.
